Accessing NRCS Programs for Organic Farmers

by Katy Green

Overview

The NRCS Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) is a voluntary cost-share program that promotes environmental stewardship and good farming practices. In the 2008 Farm Bill, EQIP was expanded to include a special emphasis on organic farms, called the Organic Initiative (OI). The Organic Initiative operates in the same way as EQIP, but is funding that is specifically set-aside for organic growers. To qualify for the Organic Initiative, farmers must be either certified organic, transitioning to organic production or exempt under the NOP rule. Organic producers can still participate in the standard EQIP ranking if they choose.

Benefits

There are numerous benefits to organic producers that choose to participate in the Organic Initiative. First, is cost share assistance to implement practices that address farm resource concerns, while fulfilling many requirements of the organic standards.

Assistance can be provided to:

- Develop a conservation plan
- Develop a transition to organic plan
- Establish boundaries and buffer zones
- Improve soil quality and organic matter and implement crop rotations

- Develop a pest management strategy that is consistent with organic standards
- Develop a grazing plan that meets OSP and pasture rule requirements
- Enhance nutrient management on the farm through increased waste management and on farm composting
- Improve irrigation efficiency

Other benefits include higher payment rates for some practices over the existing EQIP rates and more competitive ranking opportunities.

Accessing the Programs

The first step in accessing these programs is to visit your county FSA office and make sure your farm is on file there. Once that's done you should schedule an appointment to meet with an NRCS staff member in your county. This can happen at your farm or at the NRCS office.

During this meeting you should paint a picture of the overall goals of your farm and current barriers to meeting those goals. If you have an idea of the kinds of NRCS practices that you'd like to implement it's also important to highlight for the NRCS staff member the resource concern the practice will address. Building a good rapport with your NRCS representative can be helpful in making sure you get the most out of these programs.
